

INSEED
Indic Society
for Education and Development

About INSEED

The Indic Society for Education and Development is a not-for-profit organisation, established in India to extend a helping hand to the under-privileged sections of the Indian society, particularly in the rural and tribal areas. The benefits of the current economic growth and the innovations in technology are passing these groups by. In order for these people to be active participants in the progress of the nation, and to enjoy the benefits of the economic growth, we ought to give them a helping hand. The social, economical and technological upliftment has to be egalitarian, in an increasingly globalising world.

1, Swami Enterprises Complex,
Tigrania road, Nashik - 422 011,
Maharashtra, INDIA

<http://www.inseed.org/>

inseed@inseed.org

Objectives

- Dissemination of vocational training
 - Improvement of literacy rate through adult and child education
 - Foundation of libraries and reading rooms
 - Dissemination of civic sense for betterment of social life
 - Promotion of mathematics and English, and sports
 - Health promotion
 - Home economics
 - Waste management and recycling
 - Water and groundwater management
 - Reaching people through media (documentaries)
 - Networking of like-minded people
-

Activities

- Muktangan - Literacy centre and toy and book library for children at Nashik
 - Scholarships for pursuing vocational training or higher education
 - Activity-based out-of-school education for children of construction workers in Nashik
 - Activity-based out-of-school education for slum children of Nashik at Jalaram mandir
 - Helping "Bachat Gat" women in developing small-scale businesses
 - Scientific projects and training workshops in statistics and data management
 - Working with orphanages for betterment of the inmates
-

Contributions and collaborations

The Society generates funds by the membership fees, contributions from members and others who like to promote the Society's activities. Many families are happy to donate toys and books which lie unused when their children outgrow these. Contributions are also received in terms of the time spent by experts in craft, music, sports and yoga, to teach children at the education centres, and by providing used computers which are used in various activities including adult literacy.
